

I Saw the Virgin Mary of the End Times

The liturgical year is coming to an end.... The readings tell us about Christ's return in glory and the Last Judgment. The first harvest is that of the good grain which enters into the joy of the Lord; then another harvest which is poured into the immense vat of the wrath of God. Some apprehension? Instead, I chose to ask myself the following question: And the Virgin Mary in all of this?

The answer lies in our charisma. For her God reserved the final battles. How can I explain it to me? I still think of that old mother I saw three days ago in a field near our Robert Mattlé high school. She was picking up the worse grain that last week's reapers left behind and which was going to fall prey to bushfires. With this poor quality grain, she will be able to cook "Ti-n-diné"¹, failing to be able to make "Cacayissi"². Believe me, the first meal can be just as appetizing as the second!

Isn't this woman in the image of the Virgin Mary? Mother Mary, I believe, discreetly passes between the two harvests, that of the Son of man and that of the other angel, to collect in her apron the less good and entrust them to the Mercy of the Father and of the Son.
